

PHOTOS BY BUSTER DEAN AND KAREN WARREN/ PHOTO COLLAGE BY CLARISSA CONTRERAS: CHRONICLE

This year's 10 winners of the Women on the Move contest include business leaders, entrepreneurs and marketing executives. The annual awards, sponsored by Texas Executive Women, began in 1985 to celebrate the professional and community accomplishments of women in Houston. Money raised by the group benefits the TEW Mentoring Program, Texas Executive Women's Scholarship Fund at the University of Houston College of Business and community organizations serving women and girls. The annual luncheon is scheduled for Oct. 27 at the InterContinental Hotel. For more information, go to www.tewhouston.org.

Vomen on the Move

QUESTION: What advice would you give young girls interested in business careers?

tion.

rent job as director of health and envi-

By L.M. SIXEL | HOUSTON CHRONICLE

"Find a great mentor and surround yourself with good teammates. You'll find opportunity and support that will help you accomplish president before your goals.' moving to Hous-Gardner sent a blind résumé to the Houston Astros

PAM

GARDNER

Pam Gardner

grew up in Wisconsin and put herself

through college by waiting tables and

working the graveyard shift at mill. After the local paper

graduating from

Stout, her first job

was in the mail-

public relations

and advertising

Over 12 years

Gardner moved up the ranks to vice agency.

room at a Chicago

the University of Wisconsin-in 1989 because they were looking for a director of communications.

She got the job, and Gardner eventually became president of business operations.

She is on the boards of the Houston Area Women's Center, Central Houston and the Newfield Explora-

She has two adult children.

DANGUOLE

ALTMAN

SPAKEVICIUS

Danguole Spak-

evicius Altman was born in Boston to

ania who had fled

Soviet occupation.

speak English until

She didn't kindergarten and

bachelor's degree in economics from

Harvard University

and an MBA from

Yale. Altman started with the consulting firm McKinsey

& Co., specializing in health care and insurance clients.

She married a fel-

ended up earning a

parents from Lithu-

"The advice I'd give any young person who is planning their career is the need to spend time upfront to really understand their values and what's important low consultant to them to and they moved to achieve." Houston in 1989. Today she is cofounder and CEO of Vapogenix, which is completing preclinical pain management trials; managing director of Interlaken Ventures, a health care consulting firm; and corporate secretary of FemPartners, which manages physician practices and runs fertility clinics.

Altman and her husband have four

"Pick three people in different

businesses and different

careers that are different

chosen field

and ask them

than your

the best thing they have done in their chosen

field and ask their biggest mistake was,

and learn from those three people."

them what

"Know your strengths and play to them. And surround yourself, whether it's peer colleagues or people who work for you, with ronmental policy for the city of Houston, she has added preventative care to health clinics, people who quickly assembled have complean all-volunteer mentary mini-hospital that treated more than skills." 10,000 Hurricane Katrina victims and wrote Houston's smoking ban. Marks is also on the boards of the Anti-Defamation League-Southwest Region and The Health Museum.

Marks has a bachelor's degree from Emory University and a law degree and a master's of public health from the University of Texas. She is married with three sons.

MARKS After selling her stake in a temporary attorney-placement agency she helped create, Elena Marks got involved with Planned Parent-"My advice hood of Houston ... would be and eventually to choose became chair of the something national organizayou enjoy In Marks' curdoing, because you will spend a lot of time doing that. Be yourself, be very flexible and always do whatever you can do to continue to learn." for Success Houston, the Ensemble

Museum Houston. She is married to one of Mayor

FONTAINE Native Houstonian Diedra

Booker Fontaine started her career as a computer graduating with a bachelor's degree from the University of North Texas. She moved into auditing and it with earned an MBA preparation, from Texas Southperspiration, ern University, persistence going to class eveand panache. nings and week-I don't think ends. A love of travel there is one led her to Contisecret to nental Airlines, success. We where she became have two an auditor in 1990.

DIEDRA

versity and sales development. Fontaine is on the board of Dress

Today, Fontaine

is director of di-

Theatre, the Ronald McDonald House in Houston and Holocaust

Bill White's top aides. They have one 12-year-old daughter.

DYESS

"Find your

Then pursue

choices: we or design a

"There is no substitute for education

in this day

Not only is a and age.

but a life. '

can earn a life

passion.

SOFIA ADROGUE'

Sofia Adrogue' was born in Argentina and moved to Boston with her family when she was 8. Three years later, her family moved to Houston. Adrogue' received her bachelor's degree from Rice University and a law degree from the University of Houston Law Cen-Adrogue' worked for three area law firms before joining Epstein Becker Green Wickliff & Hall in 2004 for two years as a partner.

Adrogue' currently handles business litigation at Looper Reed & McGraw.

Adrogue' is on the board of the Memorial Hermann Foundation, Museum of Fine Arts Houston, Theatre Under the Stars and United Way of the Texas Gulf Coast.

Adrogue' has three children, and her husband is an investment banker.

"The first thing you do ... starting in business or any career, is that you have to know yourself, your values and your principles. Then set your use that set of principles goals high and to achieve them."

dent for transition management. She is married to a lawyer in Houston, and they have two children

SUSAN HODGE

valedictorian of her high school class, and, except for a $50 contribution from her parents, paid for college by working summers. She graduated from Iowa State University with a business degree and took an accounting job

Susan Hodge was at Shell Oil Co. in Houston. She left a few years later to take other jobs, including one with Enron as assistant treasurer, which included assembling the financing for a Turkish power plant. She also earned an MBA at the University of Texas.

Hodge returned to Shell as treasurer in 1997. Today she is vice presiserving in the Marine Corps. She has a 1-year-old grandson and another grandchild on the way.

KATHY WILLIAMS

Kathy Williams grew up in a military family and ended up in Texas for college.

She graduated from Texas Woman's University and was editor of the student newspaper. From there she took a television reporting job in Lubbock and moved on to behind-the-camera jobs in a succession of bigger media markets including Washington, D.C., and Chicago. One of those jobs was in Houston, and she returned in 2002 to become vice president and news director at KRIV. Williams coauthored two children's books, including Everybody Has a Daddy, to expose kids to a variety of families.

She is a board member at her alma mater. Williams has a son.

PATTIE DALE TYE

Pattie Dale Tye began her career selling life and disability income insurance, then moved up the ranks at AT&T in a variety of sales "Never stop positions. the learning A decade ago journey, Tye switched careers again, beand, to me, coming the chief one critical operating officer element of for a call center in succeeding Orlando and then in business taking a similar position in Houston. in Houston is Three years ago, to give back while you are moving forward."

Tye went back to the insurance business as president of Humana Health Plans in Houston. She oversees Humana's local network of 8,000 health care providers and 250,000 subscribers. Tye grew up in Lake City, Fla., and received a bachelor's degree in management from the University of Florida.

She is on the board of the American Heart Association of Houston. Tye's husband is in the outplacement business.

"Find a degree tied to your passion and work in the field that you love. You don't want to find yourself in a job or career that at 4:45 in the afternoon, you are saying to yourself, 'Only 15 more minutes to go.' "

large consumer companies. Today, she is director of cor-

Rockets, which includes marketing programs. She serves on the board of Tal-ento Bilingüe de Houston. Castañeda got married this summer to a technology consultant.

FRANCES CASTAÑEDA

Frances Castañeda Dyess worked her way through the University of Houston in a part-time bank job, where she saw how fast the new college graduates were promoted. She became the first in her family to graduate from college, obtaining a bachelor's degree in communications from Southern Methodist Univer-graduate sity in 1992. degree is Castañeda went essential for on to work for Hissuccess in panic advertising agencies, developthe business ing campaigns for world."

porate services for the Houston

ILEANA TREVIÑO

Ileana Treviño moved to Houston 11 years ago when her husband's job transferred the family here.

She joined the University of Houston as executive director for the office of affirmative action and later became vice chancellor of university advancement, di $college\ degree$ recting fundraising, advertising and public relations. Four years ago, Treviño became the imperative CEO of Memorial Hermann Foundation and heads its fundraising efforts. The daughter of a career Colombian diplomat, Treviño was raised in the Washington, D.C., area. She has a bachelor's degree from Boston College and a master's from Boston University. Treviño sits on the board of Holocaust Museum Houston. She and her husband have three children.

10